66th Year-244

Old Roundtown Beginning To Bulge A Little

Big Show Nearing It's Opening Gun

Weather Man Says It'll Be 'Fair'

Circleville was beginning to bulge a little Tuesday.

The city's seams were being taxed and the time was drawing near when the full head of steam being generated would blow out the top.

Opening of the 45th Circleville Pumpkin Show was drawing near—only a matter of hours away now.

There are a lot of loose strings dangling.

But there always are on the eve of the big four-day show. Pumpkin festival officials readily agree, but they also always point to a statement by Bob Colville, Mr. Pumpkin Show himself:

"Well, I reckon if we had any high-powered organization the whole thing would flop."

OFFICIALS were very weary Tuesday. They have been on the job from sunup until midnight every night for the last several days.

Exhibits were to be staked out and this took time. And there was a concession man here and a thrill ride man there who weren't just sure where they were to set up.

But—as it always has in past years—the whole thing was ironing itself out—slowly but surely.

It will be in high gear by noon Wednesday—in plenty of time ahead of the opening ceremony scheduled for 2:15 p. m.

After that formal ceremony, the Pumpkin Show—the biggest free show on earth—will start its four-day run.

And only Father Time, tolling out the strokes of midnight Saturday, will halt it.

Of course, the weatherman will have a little say-so in determining whether the festival lopes along or goes at its customary gallop.

He has turned a nasty look at the Pumpkin Show in the past, but he never stopped it.

CIRCLEVILLE'S wide, paved, well-drained streets can handle a lot of foul weather and still not hurt the crowd.

Old-timers recall that back in about 1912 or 1914 opening day of Pumpkin Show dawned with snow. It rained about noon. But the show started on time and by mid-afternoon visitors were doffing their topcoats.

Then there was one other time—long, long ago—when show officials woke up one morning and found several inches of snow had fallen. And so had the majority of exhibit and concession tents.

Another year, they staged a horse show on the high school athletic field. Snow came and the field's floodlight bulbs "popped like firecrackers." But then the snow stopped, the electricians were called in and the show went on.

This year, as every year, show officials cast eyes upward to get an inkling on what Mr. Weatherman thought he had in store for the 1951 festival.

The U. S. Weather Bureau said the fair weather will continue Tuesday night, giving way to increasing cloudiness Wednesday.

"We can look for cooler air Wednesday night and Thursday," said the forecaster, "with showers Wednesday contributing to a drop in temperature."

"Temperatures in the low 20s in Montana, Iowa and Minnesota will affect Ohio temperatures somewhat." Low temperatures here will hover around 51 degrees.

Show officials were not the only ones making wild dashes to tie up the remaining loose strings.

Already, highwaymen had blocked off the downtown area and through traffic on state and federal routes was being shunted around.

Concession men were erecting their tents and booths and the Gooding Co., which always winds up its season with the Pumpkin Show, had pulled in its thrill ride trucks and was unloading and assembling gear.

GOODING HAD been awaiting the big show, having parked nearly all of its equipment out on Pickaway Fairgrounds.

With only a day to go to get ready for Wednesday's opening,

Newest Concoction Slated To Be 'Punkinburgers'

First it was just an ordinary punkin.

Then came punkin pie. Somebody added punkin cake, and punkin soup, and punkin fritters, and punkin pops, and punkin-jack.

Comes now the latest punkin concoction: Punkinburgers. Yep, that's the latest Circleville Pumpkin Show gimmick.

And they will be offered this year by the Pickaway County Youth Canteen in the group's booth down on the main drag.

Eddy Amey, head of the parents' group of the canteen association, and Robert Turner, president of the Youth Canteen, reported that the concoction "tastes excellent."

The canteen group held a "trial run" on punkinburgers in Mrs. Karl Mason's kitchen here Monday evening.

THE IDEA is to take half a pumpkin, load it with hamburger and bake in an oven until the hamburger is done. There seems to be some little other secret to the process which the sponsors are not revealing.

But the resulting punkinburger, placed in a sandwich bun, is claimed to be a rare delicacy.

Credit for introducing punkinburgers to Circleville goes to Ben Gordon, local businessman, former

Man Gets Jail Vacation So He Can Work Some

A Columbus man has been given a rain check on a term in Pickaway County jail.

George Bunn, 30, of Columbus is a roofer and it seems this is his busy season.

On Oct. 1 he was sentenced to 60 days in jail by Common Pleas Judge William D. Radcliff for drunken driving, and roofing prospects appeared dim.

But they brightened up Saturday when Judge Radcliff deferred the unexpired portion of his sentence until Jan. 2. He must return on that date to serve out the other 47 days of his term.

mayor and long timer Pumpkin Show booster.

A local auto parts dealer, Gordon makes numerous trips to Columbus warehouses for merchandise. In one of these spots, he became acquainted with a battery salesman named George Sebring, a confirmed bachelor, gentleman farmer and amateur chef.

Sebring, in one of his experimenting moods, had come up with the hamburger-in-a-pumpkin recipe.

Gordon immediately labeled it "punkinburger."

The new delicacy will be available to showgoers here this week.

9 Red Migs Fall Under Guns Of U.S. Sabrejets

KOREA, Oct. 16—American Sabrejet pilots shot down a record-breaking nine Russian-type Mig-15s today and damaged five others over Northwest Korea in history's greatest day of jet fighting.

One F-86 Sabre was damaged in the swirling battles which involved more than 165 planes and ranged up to altitudes five and a half miles above earth.

The spectacular dogfights, pitting 45 Sabres against more than 120 Migs in two encounters, broke out as Allied ground forces swept Red troops from two more hills in Central Korea. In the west, however, a new Allied ridge line assault was slowed by fierce resistance.

The biggest of the day's jet engagements was fought during the afternoon when 33 Sabres tangled with more than 100 of the sweeping Communist jets.

Eight of the Migs were shot down and five damaged in this screaming battle as against one American jet damaged.

Earlier, 17 Sabres fought with 20 of the Red-nosed Migs in a morning air duel east of Sinuiju. One Red jet was sent spinning to its doom while all the Sabres emerged unscathed.

SENATOR IS CONFIDENT

Taft Says He Will Seek Presidential Nomination

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16—Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio announced his candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination today and said he is confident he will be nominated and elected.

The Senate GOP leader declared his willingness to enter the Wisconsin presidential primary in response to an invitation from party leaders, and authorized Ohio Republicans to use his name as their "first choice."

Taft said he has asked a committee composed of David S. Ingalls of Cleveland, former Republican Chairman John D. M. Hamilton of Philadelphia, and Thomas E. Coleman of Wisconsin to "recommend" and organization setup to "keep in touch with developments in various states."

The Ohio senator said he decided to run because he is convinced that a majority of Republicans "throughout the nation" as well as in Wisconsin and Ohio "really desire me to be the candidate for the party."

AT THE SAME time, he denounced "slandering tactics" aimed at other potential candidates, particularly Gov. Earl Warren of California and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Taft said he was "particularly disgusted" with a pamphlet issued by a group calling itself the "Partisan Republicans of California" which he said made "wholly unjustified attacks on Gov. Warren and General Eisenhower." He added:

"That kind of slander can only hurt the Republican Party and only serves to prove therefore that these people are not interested in the Republican Party."

Taft said he is going to run "because I believe I can conduct the only kind of campaign which will elect a Republican to office."

He declared in one of the three statements issued at a news conference on Capitol Hill:

"I have been deeply concerned that in this campaign the Republicans present an affirmative program based on the principles of government which that party has always supported—a program of progress within the principles of liberty of the individual, of state and local self-government and of economic freedom and not based on (Continued on Page Two)

Atomic Warfare Tests Readied, But All Secret

FRENCHMAN'S FLAT, Nev., Oct. 16—History's first atomic war games probably will get underway Thursday, but exact times and the results of the nuclear detonations will be kept a secret.

Indications as to when the tests would start were accompanied last night by other signs that the Atomic Energy Commission will drop a tight "uranium curtain" around the 640-square mile battlefield on the bleak Nevada badlands.

Fear that such information would aid Russian scientists attempting to monitor the tests was advanced as the reason for the news blackout by officials who rebuffed correspondents seeking even non-restricted information about the experiments.

Only the Civil Aeronautics Authority will be alerted before an atomic explosion, so that CAA can warn commercial aircraft to stay at least 200 miles from the scene.

None of the scientists who perfected the new-type atomic weapon knows precisely the power of the new arms, which have never been tested before.

Troops scheduled to take part in the game will not be used—for safety's sake—until the scientists and Army ordnance men first test the so-called "baby bombs."

TROOPS WILL be given a dry run or two, plus extensive briefing, before being exposed to a type of warfare completely alien to them.

The morale of the first troops of the atomic age, said an officer who came out to speak to assembled reporters, is good.

"The boys are mainly worried about scraping the dust off themselves and getting a laundry job now and then," he said. "We've got two outdoor movie theaters to help entertain us."

"As for the A-bomb, or whatever it is they're going to shoot off, the boys just don't give a damn."

"Greatly distressed" over the small number of advance registrations for Wednesday's visit here of the Red Cross Bloodmobile, a blood donor program spokesman Tuesday pleaded for more interest in the movement.

The spokesman is the Rev. Robert Weaver, pastor of Circleville First Methodist church and publicity chairman for the local blood program.

He said Tuesday that only 32 reservations have been made for the Wednesday Bloodmobile call. The mobile unit will be at the Presbyterian church here from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.

UN, Red Liaison Aides Agree On 6 Of 7 Points

TOKYO, Oct. 16—Allied and Red liaison officers agreed today on six points in connection with revival of the Korea truce conference, but remained deadlocked over the size of projected neutral zones.

A new Communist proposal calling for a 175-square-mile area free of hostilities was rejected by the Allies who insisted on 20 square miles of attack-free territory where neutrality violations would be less likely.

Two of the United Nations armistice delegates thereupon flew from Korea to Tokyo where they conferred with their chief, Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway.

Top UN negotiators are Vice Adm. Charles Turner Joy and Air Force Maj. Gen. Lawrence C. Craigie.

They went to UN headquarters and consulted with Ridgway, presumably on the liaison talks at Panmunjom, newly chosen site for the armistice negotiations.

A few hours earlier, Ridgway declared his delegates—once the parley is resumed—will continue to press for a cease-fire line approximating the battlefield and which UN forces "can defend against any surprise attack."

Anti-London Feelings Up In Egypt

West Dealt Blows By Government

CAIRO, Oct. 16—The explosive Anglo-Egyptian dispute took a grave new turn today when British troops went into action against rioters in the Suez Canal Zone and Egypt ordered an army regiment to the scene to "establish order."

A broadcast from New Delhi heard in London said it was "understood" that British paratroopers, presumably from the recently reinforced island of Cyprus had landed at Suez. There was no official confirmation of the report.

Members of Britain's First Battalion of Lancashire Fusiliers—under official orders to "resist any attack" on British lives or property—quelled the Egyptian nationalist rioters who looted and set fire to an army canteen in Ismailia, largest town in the canal zone.

Elsewhere, other British troops seized and began operating railroads when Egyptian employees of the roads refused to transport British soldiers traveling between their camps and towns.

THE RIOTERS were encouraged by yesterday's unanimous action of the Egyptian parliament abrogating the treaties with Britain which provided for stationing British troops in the Suez Canal Zone and for joint rule of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

The British War Office in London announced that a British soldier was stabbed "in broad daylight" Monday in Ismailia and a bus carrying British school children was stoned. The condition of the soldier was not made known.

A possibly dangerous situation involving British and Egyptian troops apparently was set up when the Egyptian ministry of war in Cairo ordered a regiment of soldiers into the tense Suez zone.

The Egyptian soldiers were under orders to "help police forces establish order."

A British military spokesman in Cairo said that "the situation in the canal zone has deteriorated."

The same British office charged that Egyptian police in Ismailia instead of trying to prevent the looting and arson "actually helped the rioters."

Crowds in other cities and towns throughout Egypt took to the streets shouting anti-British slogans.

IN ALEXANDRIA, 40 Egyptians were reported injured in a clash with steel-helmeted police in the main square of the city.

Troops arrested 50 persons in the demonstration staged to celebrate the abrogation of the treaties.

The crowds defied a government ban on demonstrations and first gathered at the Cairo rail station to see Premier Mustafa Naha's Pasha before his departure for Cairo.

Later the throng regrouped and marched on Rameh Square in the center of the city where they began stoning stores, then police who tried to disperse them.

Guards were strengthened at the French and Turkish embassies while foreign schools sent pupils home and shopkeepers put up steel shutters as a precaution against the mobs.

Similar rioting took place throughout Egypt today in the wake of Egypt's refusal last night to join an Allied defense command for the Middle East.

Cheering members of parliament had approved the ouster of 10,000 British troops from the canal zone and the annexation of the Sudan.

The triple-blow to the West came in a series of rapid fire moves in the chamber of deputies, the senate and the government.

Senate Panel Raps Present Practices

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17—A Senate subcommittee proposed sweeping revision today of laws governing the conduct of federal officials to meet conditions exposed by congressional influence probers.

The changes were recommended in an 89-page report put before Congress by senators who spent months at hearings on ethics in government and politics.

While finding that "the basic integrity of government is relatively high," the subcommittee found much to criticize in both the federal service and politics.

Its recommendations included: 1. Disclosure of all income, assets and financial dealings by members of Congress, federal employees receiving $10,000 a year or more, top military men and high officials of the political parties.

Anti-London Feelings Up In Egypt

West Deal Blows By Government

CAIRO, Oct. 16—The explosive Anglo-Egyptian dispute took a grave new turn today when British troops went into action against rioters in the Suez Canal Zone and Egypt ordered an army regiment to the scene to "establish order."

A broadcast from New Delhi heard in London said it was "understood" that British paratroopers, presumably from the recently reinforced island of Cyprus had landed at Suez. There was no official confirmation of the report.

Members of Britain's First Battalion of Lancashire Fusiliers—under official orders to "resist any attack" on British lives or property—quelled the Egyptian nationalist rioters who looted and set fire to an army canteen in Ismailia, largest town in the canal zone.

Elsewhere, other British troops seized and began operating railroads when Egyptian employees of the roads refused to transport British soldiers traveling between their camps and towns.

THE RIOTERS were encouraged by yesterday's unanimous action of the Egyptian parliament abrogating the treaties with Britain which provided for stationing British troops in the Suez Canal Zone and for joint rule of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

The British War Office in London announced that a British soldier was stabbed "in broad daylight" Monday in Ismailia and a bus carrying British school children was stoned. The condition of the soldier was not made known.

A possibly dangerous situation involving British and Egyptian troops apparently was set up when the Egyptian ministry of war in Cairo ordered a regiment of soldiers into the tense Suez zone.

The Egyptian soldiers were under orders to "help police forces establish order."

A British military spokesman in Cairo said that "the situation in the canal zone has deteriorated."

The same British official charged that Egyptian police in Ismailia instead of trying to prevent the looting and arson "actually helped the rioters."

Crowds in other cities and towns throughout Egypt took to the streets shouting anti-British slogans.

IN ALEXANDRIA, 40 Egyptians were reported injured in a clash with steel-helmeted police in the main square of the city.

Troops arrested 50 persons in the demonstration staged to celebrate the abrogation of the treaties.

The crowds defied a government ban on demonstrations and first gathered at the Cairo rail station to see Premier Mustafa Naha's Pasha before his departure for Cairo.

Later the throng regrouped and marched on Rameh Square in the center of the city where they began stoning stores, then police who tried to disperse them.

Guards were strengthened at the French and Turkish embassies while foreign schools sent pupils home and shopkeepers put up steel shutters as a precaution against the mobs.

Similar rioting took place throughout Egypt today in the wake of Egypt's refusal last night to join an Allied defense command for the Middle East.

Cheering members of parliament had approved the ouster of 10,000 British troops from the canal zone and the annexation of the Sudan.

The triple-blow to the West came in a series of rapid fire moves in the chamber of deputies, the senate and the government.

HORSE SENSE AND RELIGION

Nevada Senator Seeking To Write GOP Platform

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16 — Sen. George W. Malone, Nevada Republican, has opened a tour of Pacific Coast states seeking the help of local leaders in drafting a GOP platform for the 1952 presidential campaign.

Malone hopes to get enough popular support to secure serious consideration of his platform by the GOP convention next summer in Chicago.

Among others, Malone has a plank declaring:

"This nation needs a liberal dose of common horse sense and old-time religion. We need an administration which will reestablish the integrity of government and encourage integrity between individuals and between nations and assure respect for American citizens at home and abroad."

Malone explains: "THE REPUBLICANS can elect their nominee to the presidency in 1952. Of course, they will ask the voters to 'put the Democrat rascals out' but, to win, they must have a platform of specific pledges, which will appeal to the average American."

"The simplest way to get a platform that will appeal to the average American is to get his views on drafting that platform. That's what I propose to do."

Malone's first stop is before the conference of Republican leaders from eleven western states in Seattle. After that, he plans to meet with sectional leaders in Oregon and California. Later on, he will tour other states.

The Nevada Republican has with him a tentative draft of a GOP platform but he is ready to change planks or insert new ones to meet popular GOP views. Malone said:

"We need a new administration with no vested rights in past mistakes—an administration which can shed from the federal payroll the leeches and the hangers-on that have accumulated over the past 18 years and can re-establish integrity in government."

"It is time the American government adopted American foreign and domestic policies which will insure our security and continued well-being as a nation."

Some of Malone's tentative planks are:

1. ESTABLISH in this country "a market for the good of foreign nations on a basis of fair and reasonable competition, protecting our workers and investors against unfair competition of foreign low-wage producers."
2. "Make the Western Hemisphere self-sufficient for any emergency" by encouraging "production particularly of strategic and critical materials."
3. Establish a sound currency while "re-establishing the gold standard" and emphasizing "the use of silver."
4. Restore to Congress "its constitutional authority to regulate foreign commerce, to regulate money and to approve treaties."
5. Establish the "free currency exchange principle for mutual trade" with foreign countries and "stop gift loans to foreign nations."

At the same time require foreign governments to set up a "free exchange of their currencies," the protection of "private investments in their countries" and "equal access to the markets of those nations which we are committed to defend."

Other planks express opposition to the reciprocal trade treaties, to "the administration's inflated currency policies" and to high taxes.

Ball Bat Trial Going To Jury

COLUMBUS, Oct. 16—The "ball bat murder" trial of Sanford L. Hogs, 26, of Columbus, will go to a county criminal court jury today.

Hogs is accused of fatally beating Charles Chenuault, 26, a night club pickup, and robbing him of $23 last November.

The defendant has steadfastly denied he originated a plot with three companions, two of them women, to visit east side night clubs looking for "prospects" with money.

Hogs admitted in court yesterday he struck two blows in the attack on Chenuault, but claimed a companion, Percy Craft, "told me he had a bat in the trunk of the car and he wanted me to hit him on the head and take his money."

Reason given for the return was that the two lower courts have final jurisdiction of the subject matter.

Wiant said he left Circleville in 1899. He is visiting this week with a friend, Ralph Ward of East Main street, and with Nieces Gladys Wiggins and Ruth Bowser of 723 North Court street.

Ohio History Tests Attract County Pupils

Several junior and senior classmates from Pickaway County and Circleville schools are expected to participate in a fifth annual Ohio history competition this week.

Preliminary tests are to be given locally this week in the annual Ohio history, government and citizenship contest sponsored by Ohio university.

At least one Circleville pupil will seek honors in the test. He is Gordon Blake, a senior in Circleville high school.

In addition, several more contestants from the county school systems are expected to enter competition. This contest is open to any junior or senior who is taking or has taken American history or government courses.

One winner from each of Ohio's counties will be chosen to compete in the final essay exam Nov. 16 during a two-day, expense paid trip to Ohio university. The county winners will be competing for $245 in cash and certificates of achievement.

Vacation Ahead For Youngsters In City Schools

Circleville school boys and girls will receive two half-day vacations from classwork this week to attend the 1951 Circleville Pumpkin Show.

Superintendent Frank Fischer said the city schools will be dismissed Thursday and Friday afternoons for Pumpkin Show.

Some of the youngsters who are to participate in the opening Little Miss Pumpkin Show parade may also be dismissed earlier than usual Wednesday afternoon.

However, school will be in full operation during Wednesday, Thursday and Friday mornings.

Except for youngsters participating in early afternoon parades, none of the county schools is expected to make a special move to dismiss for the annual Show.

Wayne and Washington Township schools, with high school boys and girls enrolled in Circleville, are expected to follow the Circleville schedule.

the scene in downtown Circleville was, to put it mildly, helter-skelter.

The women folk in local homes were having their troubles, too.

Mothers were seeing that little Susie was all primed up because Wednesday afternoon is to be her big day.

That is the time for the annual Little Miss Pumpkin Show parade and selection. A record number of first and second graders will compete for top honors this year.

The little queen of the show and her two attendants are to be selected at judging to take place at 4:30 p. m.—immediately following the parade.

And their older sisters will be primping, too, because Wednesday night will bring the parade of 16 of the most attractive young women in the Circleville area. One will be crowned Miss Pumpkin Show of 1951. The two runnersup in the judging will be the queen's attendants.

And THEN there was another category of women—those home on the range (kitchen range, that is)—and they were making preparations to enter the two daily bake-a-pumpkin pie contests. . . . all to qualify for the grand championship prize due Saturday night.

Two baking contests are to be run daily, one using certain specified commercial products, the other using any ingredient just so the end result is pumpkin pie.

And Saturday night will see Gov. Frank J. Lausche make his annual official visit, crown the grand champion pie-baker and waltz away with the prize pie.

The grand champion baker will get a deluxe electric kitchen range.

Mrs. S. E. Duvall of Ashville, who was the grand champion last year, will not enter the contest this season. Thus, the field remains wide open to all comers.

Thursday will feature the pet parade in the afternoon and the Music Parade at night.

Friday afternoon is to be highlighted by the Baby Parade in the afternoon and the Industrial Parade in the evening.

Saturday afternoon will see the Winners' Parade and a batch of contests including one in pie-eating—pumpkin pie, of course.

Saturday night will see Governor Lausche's official visit and the crowning of the grand champion pumpkin pie baker.

All the while, there will be plenty of fun and frolic in this greatest free show on earth.

At least 40 bands will make their appearances before the four-day run is completed and there will be free street dancing on North Court street near the offices of The Circleville Herald.

OSU Trustees Standing Pat On Gag Rule

WOOSTER, Oct. 16—Trustees of Ohio State University have ruled to stand pat on their campus speech control rule.

The university governing body made the statement late yesterday after holding meetings for four hours at the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station south of Wooster.

The trustees stood by their original ruling made Sept. 4 which gave President Howard L. Bevis the power to ban speakers from the Ohio State campus who he thought would tend to undermine traditional American institutions and government.

In the statement upholding the gag rule, the board said, "as trustees of Ohio State university we encourage the fullest academic freedom consistent with national security. The facilities of the university will not be made available to known Communists or members of other subversive groups who seek to undermine the basic liberties of America."

"The university has always practiced the right in its discretion to invite only such persons as it felt would forward the general program of education. This policy will continue in effect."

In addition he was fined $10 and costs and sentenced to 30 days in Pickaway jail. Twenty days of the jail term were suspended.

Brown was arrested on West Main street by Circleville Police Officers Robert Temple and James Cockrell. He was fined $10 and costs by Mayor Thurman L. Miller for driving without an operator's license.

Judge Radcliff suspended a portion of the sentence on the operator's license of Charles Arledge to permit him to operate a truck for Clyde Cook.

Arledge was deprived of his driver's license for six months on Aug. 8 when he pleaded guilty to an accusation of drunken driving.

He Left Here In 1899, But Is Back For Show

Circleville's 1951 Pumpkin Show has exercised its magnetic influence on a former resident who has been away from this city 52 years.

He is S. B. Wiant, 74, of Moweaqua, Ill., back in Circleville this week to see the 1951 show and visit friends and relatives.

Wiant said he left Circleville in 1899. He is visiting this week with a friend, Ralph Ward of East Main street, and with Nieces Gladys Wiggins and Ruth Bowser of 723 North Court street.

He plans to return to his home Friday after visiting this year's Pumpkin Show.

House-Moving Project Starts

First in a parcel of five houses on East Mill street purchased from the Circleville board of education in early September by Cecil VanCamp was being moved to its new site Tuesday.

House-moving equipment has been employed to move one of the houses out onto Mill street, while another is expected to be moved onto the street soon.

VanCamp, who purchased all five houses for a total of $6,400, is reportedly planning to move the dwellings to the area near the new General Electric plant, East Ohio street.

Conner Hearing Is Continuing

Jury trial of Harold Conner, 42, of Circleville was continuing in Pickaway County common pleas court Tuesday.

Conner is accused of drunken driving in an accusation filed by County Prosecutor Guy Cline. During the first day of the hearing, Monday, five witnesses appeared for the state and seven for the defendant.

Accused Man Pleads Innocent

A plea of innocent to an accusation of grand larceny has been entered in Pickaway County common pleas court by Garfield Stewart, 28, of Springfield.

Stewart was indicted by Pickaway grand jury last January.

Fire Destroys Large Barn

Fire destroyed a barn on the Robert O. Barnes farm on Williamsport Route 1 Monday.

Along with the barn, a 60 by 40-foot structure, 1,800 bales of hay and 400 bushels of corn were burned.

Williamsport fire department rushed a truck to the scene.

Pickaway County Deputy Sheriff Walter Richards said the fire apparently was started by a small child who went into the barn with matches "to burn out a hen's nest."

the scene in downtown Circleville was, to put it mildly, helter-skelter.

The women folk in local homes were having their troubles, too.

Mothers were seeing that little Susie was all primmed up because Wednesday afternoon is to be her big day.

That is the time for the annual Little Miss Pumpkin Show parade and selection. A record number of first and second graders will compete for top honors this year.

The little queen of the show and her two attendants are to be selected at judging to take place at 4:30 p. m.—immediately following the parade.

And their older sisters will be priming, too, because Wednesday night will bring the parade of 16 of the most attractive young women in the Circleville area. One will be crowned Miss Pumpkin Show of 1951. The two runnersup in the judging will be the queen's attendants.

AND THEN there was another category of women—those home on the range (kitchen range, that is)—and they were making preparations to enter the two daily bake-a-pumpkin-pie contests. . . . all to qualify for the grand championship prize due Saturday night.

Two baking contests are to be run daily, one using certain specified commercial products, the other using any ingredient just so the end result is pumpkin pie.

And Saturday night will see Gov. Frank J. Lausche make his annual official visit, crown the grand champion pie-baker and waltz away with the prize pie.

The grand champion baker will get a deluxe electric kitchen range.

Mrs. S. E. Duval of Ashville, who was the grand champion last year, will not enter the contest this season. Thus, the field remains wide open to all comers.

Thursday will feature the pet parade in the afternoon and the Music Parade at night.

Friday afternoon is to be highlighted by the Baby Parade in the afternoon and the Industrial Parade in the evening.

Saturday afternoon will see the Winners' Parade and a batch of contests including one in pie-eating—pumpkin pie, of course.

Saturday night will see Governor Lausche's official visit and the crowning of the grand champion pumpkin pie baker.

All the while, there will be plenty of fun and frolic in this great-est free show on earth.

At least 40 bands will make their appearances before the four-day run is completed and there will be free street dancing on North Court street near the offices of The Circleville Herald.

Editors' Roundtable

"Editors' Roundtable" is a twice-a-week release based on a study of an average of about 150 daily newspaper editorial pages. The major issue of the day is analyzed and digested, passed on to readers as a survey of opinion from the nation's leading editors. It is the "voice of the press."

CEASE FIRE

Editors, in a substantial plurality, reserve conclusions of opinion now on whether new cease-fire talks in Korea will result in a truce. But a large minority of editors is more confident that increased United Nations conventional military strength, plus the threat of possible use of new weapons, will persuade the Communists to accept, substantially, UN truce proposals. While a somewhat smaller minority continues to feel that Communist peace talks are still only a delaying strategy, part of a Moscow strategy to use Chinese manpower to keep American forces tied down in Korea for as long as may be possible.

ATLANTA Constitution (Dem.): "The current United Nations offensive undoubtedly has had a great deal to do with the Reds' sudden decision to resume the cease-fire talks. . . . The Kremlin must realize that Red China is doomed to defeat without all-out participation of Russia. She is perhaps not ready to take that step. . . . The chance for an eventual truce is good—but United States policymakers will understand that a truce will mean that although armed conflict has ended, the war continues. . . . Wherever the octopus strikes, Soviet Russia must be made aware that its tentacles will be chopped off. . . ."

WASHINGTON News (Ind.): "Merely shifting the site of the talks offers little encouragement. For the negotiators are still confronted with the primary question of where to establish an armistice line. The Communists, who have shown no signs of yielding since the discussions began last July, still insist that the line be along the 38th Parallel. The Allies, determined not to give up hard-won ground, want the cease-fire along the present battle line. As the argument proceeds on this point, the Communists have substantial advantage in knowing that we are committed to a policy of limited war."

COLUMBIA (S.C.) Record (Ind.-Dem.): "It should not surprise that the Communists have held out for the terms they thought originally they might be able to obtain. But the United Nations price for the truce has gone up as the position of its armies has improved. . . . The Communists could have increased their bargaining power, if Moscow had decided to increase its military investment in Korea. Apparently Moscow has not. . . . A truce—on some line—seems therefore the logical prospect. For neither side has much to gain by protracting the fighting. Another winter of war could be fearfully expensive to both sides."

BIRMINGHAM News (Ind.-Dem.): "The Communists would like to have a 38th Parallel agreement which would not be in such obvious conflict with claims that they had defeated the aggressors. . . . It is hardly to be expected, then, that they are now prepared to give in readily on this issue. . . . It may be that a solution will be possible on the basis of a UN declaration that if an armistice is followed by a settlement giving adequate assurances against renewal of military action, then the 38th Parallel political division of the country will be restored."

NEW ORLEANS Times-Picayune (Ind.-Dem.): "A buffer zone anywhere north of the 38th Parallel would be bitter medicine for the Reds. . . . They are aware, however, that they are in a worse position now on a demarkation line than when they broke off the original talks. . . . In the background is the real power—Stalin—who controls the supply of fighting equipment and has no apparent reason to like the effect of the Korean affair on the Western rearmament effort and the will of the Western world to extend its defensive alliances."

WICHITA Eagle (Ind.): "The Reds . . . are playing with peace to gain whatever advantage they might derive from the respite. On the record there is no reason to doubt that the Reds mean to continue the war in Korea. Moscow's strategy is to keep America's forces pinned down in an out-of-the-way place by Stalin's cheapest commodity, Chinese manpower. We could have knocked Red China out of the war at one time with what we had on the scene. That might not be possible now, since Russia has contributed considerably to a Chinese build-up."

CHARLOTTE News (Ind.-Dem.): "The Communists cannot but have noted the increasingly bold talk from American military and atomic experts. They have been forewarned that the U.S. now possesses formidable new weapons that can be effectively used on the battlefield, without killing and maiming civilians in a new Hiroshima. . . . It is our opinion that the fear of defeat has prompted this latest Communist proposal for a renewal of the truce talks. . . . The enemy knows that the free world is growing stronger by the day, and will not tolerate forever a military stalemate that is costing the lives of free men."

Editors' Roundtable

"Editors' Roundtable" is a twice-a-week release based on a study of an average of about 150 daily newspaper editorial pages. The major issue of the day is analyzed and digested, passed on to readers as a survey of opinion from the nation's leading editors. It is the "voice of the press."

CEASE FIRE

Editors, in a substantial plurality, reserve conclusions of opinion now on whether new cease-fire talks in Korea will result in a truce. But a large minority of editors is more confident that increased United Nations conventional military strength, plus the threat of possible use of new weapons, will persuade the Communists to accept, substantially, UN truce proposals. While a somewhat smaller minority continues to feel that Communist peace talks are still only a delaying strategy, part of a Moscow strategy to use Chinese manpower to keep American forces tied down in Korea for as long as may be possible.

ATLANTA Constitution (Dem.): "The current United Nations offensive undoubtedly has had a great deal to do with the Reds' sudden decision to resume the cease-fire talks. . . . The Kremlin must realize that Red China is doomed to defeat without all-out participation of Russia. She is perhaps not ready to take that step. . . . The chance for an eventual truce is good—but United States policymakers will understand that a truce will mean that although armed conflict has ended, the war continues. . . . Wherever the octopus strikes, Soviet Russia must be made aware that its tentacles will be chopped off. . . ."

WASHINGTON News (Ind.): "Merely shifting the site of the talks offers little encouragement. For the negotiators are still confronted with the primary question of where to establish an armistice line. The Communists, who have shown no signs of yielding since the discussions began last July, still insist that the line be along the 38th Parallel. The Allies, determined not to give up hard-won ground, want the cease-fire along the present battle line. As the argument proceeds on this point, the Communists have substantial advantage in knowing that we are committed to a policy of limited war."

COLUMBIA (S.C.) Record (Ind.-Dem.): "It should not surprise that the Communists should have held out for the terms they thought originally they might be able to obtain. . . . But the United Nations price for the truce has gone up as the position of its armies has improved. . . . The Communists could have increased their bargaining power, if Moscow had decided to increase its military investment in Korea. Apparently Moscow has not. . . . A truce — on some line — seems therefore the logical prospect. For neither side has much to gain by protracting the fighting. Another winter of war could be fearfully expensive to both sides."

BIRMINGHAM News (Ind.-Dem.): "The Communists would like to have a 38th Parallel agreement which would not be in such obvious conflict with claims that they had defeated the aggressors. . . . It is hardly to be expected, then, that they are now prepared to give in readily on this issue. . . . It may be that a solution will be possible on the basis of a UN declaration that if an armistice is followed by a settlement giving adequate assurances against renewal of military action, then the 38th Parallel political division of the country will be restored."

NEW ORLEANS Times-Picayune (Ind.-Dem.): "A buffer zone anywhere north of the 38th Parallel would be bitter medicine for the Reds. . . . They are aware, however, that they are in a worse position now on a demarcation line than when they broke off the original talks. . . . In the background is the real power—Stalin—who controls the supply of fighting equipment and has no apparent reason to like the effect of the Korean affair on the Western rearmament effort and the will of the Western world to extend its defensive alliances."

WICHITA Eagle (Ind.): "The Reds . . . are playing with peace to gain whatever advantage they might derive from the respite. On the record there is no reason to doubt that the Reds mean to continue the war in Korea. Moscow's strategy is to keep America's forces pinned down in an out-of-the-way place by Stalin's cheapest commodity, Chinese manpower. We could have knocked Red China out of the war at one time with what we had on the scene. That might not be possible now, since Russia has contributed considerably to a Chinese build-up."

CHARLOTTE News (Ind.-Dem.): "The Communists cannot but have noted the increasingly bold talk from American military and atomic experts. They have been forewarned that the U.S. now possesses formidable new weapons that can be effectively used on the battlefield, without killing and maiming civilians in a new Hiroshima. . . . It is our opinion that the fear of defeat has prompted this latest Communist proposal for a renewal of the truce talks. . . . The enemy knows that the free world is growing stronger by the day, and will not tolerate forever a military stalemate that is costing the lives of free men."

MOVIES AT FIFTY

THE American motion picture industry, now at its fiftieth milestone, is one of the most influential factors in shaping American life and thought, and a leader in interpreting America to the peoples of other lands. If for a period communistic influences had infiltrated Hollywood, progress has been made in eliminating them.

Since the first flickering shows, based upon the Edison invention, were presented, the movies have gained steadily in technique and in appeal to the public. They went from silent to talkie to color and are still making progress in the art of transferring a story or a news event to the screen for the entertainment of millions.

The general tendency of Hollywood, after an interlude of propaganda films, is again to present constructive lessons through its art. The good in life is extolled and the bad gets its come uppance. If there are moral degenerates among the working personnel of Hollywood, so are there in other walks of American life, including the political. It is a custom to overplay the didoes of high-salaried movie stars, thus distorting the true picture.

The movies continue to be a bulwark of American civilization, to spread the word of the American way of life to other peoples, to make America the shining acme of achievement and to bring cheer and encouragement into the lives of millions. No other mode of entertainment has ever made such an impress upon the human family.

The movies, at 50 years of age, can boast of their accomplishments and look forward to other achievements to come.

THRIFTY AMERICANS

FOLLOWING the outbreak of the Korean war the American people, concerned over possible shortages of civilian goods, started on a spending spree, creating a wild scramble for goods which had government officials worried, and evoked loud warnings of inflationary consequences.

Congress began considering control measures, credits were tightened, rationing was even suggested. At the same time the people were urged to spend less, to save and to invest in bonds. Every governmental effort was directed toward discouraging spending and ushering in an era of thrift and saving.

Apparently the government didn't expect too enthusiastic response to its pleas. At any rate officials now express surprise at the turn of events. Not noted for thrift themselves, they are at a loss to explain why the people have turned to the good old American practice of laying up something for a rainy day.

During the three months ended last June 30 the people were stashing away money in savings accounts to such an extent that personal savings rose to a high annual rate of $21 billion. Time deposits in savings banks gained $700 million, installment and other indebtedness was reduced $500 million and the private money supply jumped $5 billion.

Members of the Federal Reserve Board say the turning to thrift may be the cure for inflation. If the government joined in the trend it certainly would be.

CEREAL KING

THERE died the other day in Battle Creek, Mich., at the age of 91, a man who did much to revolutionize the breakfast habits of the American people. He was Wheat flakes had already appeared on W. K. Kellogg, the "corn flakes king," the horizon as a cold cereal to compete with oatmeal and hominy grits. But the idea of toasted corn flakes was ridiculed in 1906, and failure was predicted for the man who lived to run it into a huge fortune with factories in the United States, Canada, Australia and South Africa.

Mr. Kellogg was one of those who believed in giving the people what they want even before they are conscious of the desire. In the cold cereal field he has had many imitators.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

Corliss Lamont once made the point:

"Can a Democratic government logically permit totalitarian parties to advocate the violent overthrow of the state? I am convinced that the answer is 'yes' and that the right to advocate revolution is a basic constitutional liberty in a Democracy."

If the right to advocate change is inherent in freedom, so is the right to oppose change. This truth, Communists and civil libertarians often choose to disregard. Yet, freedom is not a one-way street upon which only those who are in dissent may walk.

This Lamont acknowledges. He wrote: "No doubt practically everyone here today would agree with me that there exists in the United States the necessary political machinery for peaceful and Democratic change in either a conservative or a radical direction."

I think we can go further than that. For instance, there are those who are content with the American system of life. They have rights, too. I think that just as any man has the liberty to advocate vast and fundamental changes, so any American has the liberty to prevent such changes from coming into being. Just as anyone may criticize our form of government, and our economic system, and our social institutions, so any American has the liberty to fight the advocacy of such changes and to prevent them from being advocated at his expense, namely, by the use of taxpayers' money without the consent of the majority of the taxpayers' money without the consent of the majority of the taxpayers. Those who object to school auditoriums being used to advocate the destruction of the system which erected the schools, have as many rights as those who insist that schools must be moral institutions in which the fundamentals of our civilization may not be taught because they emanate from religion.

This comes down to the question of our schools and colleges. In the public schools, the public high schools and the public colleges, the ownership is vested in the people. Such institutions exist on the moneys of the taxpayers, who have the right to determine the nature and purpose and service of these institutions by a majority vote in a legislative body. The teachers, professors and administrators are employees whose nature of service, responsibilities, obligations and rights are determined by laws passed by legislatures and regulations issued by the designated officials. That is the essential contractual relationship.

Anyone has the option of accepting employment on the basis of the laws and regulations or not accepting employment. If the legislature demands a loyalty oath, those who reject the loyalty oath have the privilege of resigning. It would seem by the logic of the situation that they have no other alternative.

In privately-owned schools and colleges, other factor's enter into the picture except in such institutions as accept tax exemptions. If the legislature makes it a condition of tax exemption that those who teach take an oath of loyalty, it would seem that there are these alternatives: Either to agree to the loyalty oath or to give up the tax exemption. Institutions which refuse to accept tax exemptions cannot be involved in the conditions which accompany such exemptions.

The fallacy of those who advocate revolution is that they refuse to respect the rights of those who oppose revolution. And in a country such as ours, those who oppose revolution have every right to set up legal barriers against revolutions. Acts of Congress and of state legislatures and decisions of the courts are legitimate steps to preserve the traditions and habits of the country.

The revolutionists have always taken the position that they have the right to stand on the barricades, to shoot for their version of liberty, but they reject the right of their opponents to shoot back. They insist upon their right to advocate overthrow, by peaceful means or by violent means, of the existent society but reject the right of the majority of the existent society to adopt peaceful or violent means to defend themselves. This position is utterly untenable.

Archaeologists estimate California was inhabited 70,000 years ago, but not by retired Iowa and Kansas farmers.

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE
"NOW, pack your things," Elliot ordered when he was ready to leave. "I'll have some money ready. You can pay me back later."
"You might cash a check for me," Laura suggested.
"I think I won't do that. I don't want you to be involved, even in the most casual fashion, with a man who has a wife living. Even checks get talked about, even in this growing metropolis. I already wear a faint aura of scandal. I rode an ambulance to the hospital because a little kid I liked was hurt and I felt more than a little to blame."
"She hates me now," Laura sighed wearily. "That hurts, Jim."
"Young heartbreak is soon cured," he remarked. "You young things will both recover. I'll call you and let you know the time the plane takes off. And I'll come for you and take you to the airport."

"Which will involve me in a more than casual fashion with a man who has a wife living," she reminded him, some of the old impish look coming back into her eyes.

"This morning I consulted an eminent attorney and loquacious bridge player, Mr. Ramsay Iglehart. Mr. Iglehart has a wife who sounds off on any number of kilowatts. Undoubtedly by now the whole town knows that I'm about to resume my eligibility."

"You contradict yourself in a bewildering fashion. You won't cash a check at the bank but you'll be seen bidding me farewell at the airport," she argued.

"One thing I dislike," he announced with mock severity, "is a woman who raises questions. Men who cash checks signed by women are sometimes looked at curiously by the sexless breed of long-nosed chaps behind bank windows. Go stick your clothes in a bag, and do something about your nose. It's cute, but it's red and mournful-looking."

"I still say you're a bully," she declared. "My mother likes cats. I think that I shall spend this enforced vacation thinking about the cats."

"I," he countered at the door, "never, never have fleas. There were things . . . we swiped out of the lamps and did something about them, when there was any oil. But no fleas."

When he had gone Laura felt lighthearted and strangely young again and safe. She had been alone and hurt and hunted, and now security had returned because a man wanted to take care of her. She had thought for so long that security meant building herself up alone, standing on her own courage and integrity, telling the world to go hang because she was Laura Gallagher, who had pulled herself up from red mire by her own grit and industry. She had thought that it meant buying a good endowment and making herself indispensable, and being a good sport and good company, and suddenly all that was no good. A man's hand on her cheek, taking the sting from his domineering. "Precious," he had said. She had never been precious—not even to John Blayde. She had never been precious to anyone, not even her own mother.

Laura gathered some clothes together, discarding all but the simplest of her dresses. Then speculating that Mary Gallagher might like to see her returning daughter properly bedizened with the evidences of success in a wider world, she folded the green silk suit and put it in, along with the mad hat and the long green gloves. She stuffed a heavy gilt necklace into a corner and the reckless earrings that went with it, and then the telephone rang and she hurried to answer. But it was not Jim Elliot's voice she heard. Harrison Blayde was speaking.

"Laura—" there was misery in his voice. "Laura, if it was my fault . . . I tried to tell Eden . . . She's determined to go to Minneapolis. Laura, you've got to help me!"

She said evenly, "I can't help you, Harrie. You of all people should know that. I can only make things worse for you. I can't help you—ever, so good-by."

Ramsay Iglehart put the cap back on his fountain pen, clipped the pen neatly to a pocket, brushed off an imaginary fleck of dust from his lapel. "As I see it, Harrison," he said suavely, "this is the best way out for you."

Blayde listened patiently to all of the long, dreary plans formulated in Ramsay's legal ferret mind, plans presumably intended to effect his economic rescue.

But as he listened he heard somewhere within him, Wilky's warning to beware this sly double-crossing fox. After a long moment he spoke:

"What you propose is that you—or Joan—will lend me the money and take over what will amount to a controlling interest in the business. Is that it, Ramsay?"

Harrison tried to remain impersonal, to keep bitterness out of his tone. "I'd want time to think about that, and I want to look over that file, Ramsay."

"We can't delay too long, you know," Ramsay pushed the papers across the desk. "These New Jersey people need material and they won't wait. Try to make up your mind by tomorrow at least."

Harrison got to his feet, picked up the heavy manilla envelope, tucked it under his arm. "I have to be at the funeral at half past one," he said. "One job I dislike is being a pallbearer, especially for an old friend like Martha Fowler. You managed to get out of that, didn't you?"

Ramsay said smugly, "I have to forego many things I would like to do for my friends on account of this blood-pressure business of mine." He had not been invited to be a pallbearer but he hoped that Harrison did not know that. Harrison nodded. His feet felt heavy and numb. He hoped he wouldn't stagger getting down to the street.

"Such a blessing that poor Martha is freed from her suffering," Ramsay followed him to the door, bestowing what amounted to a priestly dismissal. "Mac is bearing up very well, but Ellen looked like a ghost when we called last night."

"Is Eden coming home soon?" "We hope so—for Christmas anyway," Harrison said.

Harrison drove back to the office, took from a brief case the clean shirt he had provided, changed and washed in the lavatory. Wilky was dressed in a navy-blue suit, with a bunch of pink flowers pinned too close to her good, faded face, but her hat was stylish and she was ready, her purse and white gloves laid out on the desk.

"You'll have a long wait at the church, Wilky," Harrison told her as they got into the car. "I have to go to the house first."

"I can sit and think," Wilky said. "I'd have brought that stuff from Iglehart's office along but I didn't think it would do to be reading in church. I don't like the look of it, Harrison. I don't like it at all!"

"I know. I don't like it either. But they've got our feet to the fire, Wilky. We can squirm but we can't escape."

"There should be a way. Gibson ought to help you out."

"It's too big, Wilky. He can't involve the bank to that extent."

Kiernan's ONE MAN'S OPINION

The Treasury would like to collect in October to spend in November the income tax monies not due until next March. Any questions?

My barber says he thinks this is a wonderful idea for anybody and would I please pay him now for all the haircuts I expect to get through next March so he can do his Christmas shopping early.

I said "but then what would you do in March with the money all spent in November and nothing coming in?" He said "I'll take a fresh lead from the Treasury; they'll think of something, they always do."

We used to pay on income we had earned, then we started paying on income as we earned it, then we started paying on income we expected to earn. Now they want us to pay in advance of expected to earn.

The Treasury says if it can get in a lot of the March money now it can keep down the deficit. This is the kind of economics that says "if I can borrow from next year I'll be in splendid shape this year."

All I know is this country wasn't founded on promissory notes, but I suppose it could be lost.

Fred and Ena Garrett, since their home was burned Saturday night, have decided they will not sell the farm they have advertised.

Miss Georgie Alexander of Reading, Pa., Mike Lewis and George Pappas of Parkersburg, W. Va., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. P. R. Alexander.

Bennett Cerf's Try, Stop Me

Tim Turner reports on a country-wide tour Dr. Wilbert Hindman, of U.S.C., has been making with a group of German exchange students of college age. In New York and Chicago, the boys were bitterly disappointed because no American bandits, cowboys or Indians were roaming the streets. They were appalled by Hindman's surmise that probably all the bandits, cowboys and Indians were home filling out their income tax returns.

In Arizona they were sure they had spotted an honest-to-goodness cowboy, but he turned out to be Publisher Robert Haas of Park Avenue, all dolled up in an Abercrombie & Fitch outfit. "Just hold on," Hindman begged. "We'll soon reach an Indian reservation and you'll see the noble red man really in the rough."

Sure enough, the train stopped at an Indian trading post. Two Indians sat in front of the building. They wore feathered headdresses and beaded leather clothes. They were listening to a ball game on the radio. A sign beside them proclaimed, "Tips accepted."

MOVIES AT FIFTY

THE American motion picture industry, now at its fiftieth milestone, is one of the most influential factors in shaping American life and thought, and a leader in interpreting America to the peoples of other lands. If for a period communistic influences had infiltrated Hollywood, progress has been made in eliminating them.

Since the first flickering shows, based upon the Edison invention, were presented, the movies have gained steadily in technique and in appeal to the public. They went from silent to talkie to color and are still making progress in the art of transferring a story or a news event to the screen for the entertainment of millions.

The general tendency of Hollywood, after an interlude of propaganda films, is again to present constructive lessons through its art. The good in life is extolled and the bad gets its comeuppance. If there are moral degenerates among the working personnel of Hollywood, so are there in other walks of American life, including the political. It is a custom to overplay the didoes of high-salaried movie stars, thus distorting the true picture.

The movies continue to be a bulwark of American civilization, to spread the word of the American way of life to other peoples, to make America the shining acme of achievement and to bring cheer and encouragement into the lives of millions. No other mode of entertainment has ever made such an impress upon the human family.

The movies, at 50 years of age, can boast of their accomplishments and look forward to other achievements to come.

THRIFTY AMERICANS

FOLLOWING the outbreak of the Korean war the American people, concerned over possible shortages of civilian goods, started on a spending spree, creating a wild scramble for goods which had government officials worried, and evoked loud warnings of inflationary consequences.

Congress began considering control measures, credits were tightened, rationing was even suggested. At the same time the people were urged to spend less, to save and to invest in bonds. Every governmental effort was directed toward discouraging spending and ushering in an era of thrift and saving.

Apparently the government didn't expect too enthusiastic response to its pleas. At any rate officials now express surprise at the turn of events. Not noted for thrift themselves, they are at a loss to explain why the people have turned to the good old American practice of laying up something for a rainy day.

During the three months ended last June 30 the people were stashing away money in savings accounts to such an extent that personal savings rose to a high annual rate of $21 billion. Time deposits in savings banks gained $700 million, installment and other indebtedness was reduced $500 million and the private money supply jumped $5 billion.

Members of the Federal Reserve Board say the turning to thrift may be the cure for inflation. If the government joined in the trend it certainly would be.

CEREAL KING

THERE died the other day in Battle Creek, Mich., at the age of 91, a man who did much to revolutionize the breakfast habits of the American people. He was Wheat flakes had already appeared on W. K. Kellogg, the "corn flakes king," the horizon as a cold cereal to compete with oatmeal and hominy grits. But the idea of toasted corn flakes was ridiculed in 1906, and failure was predicted for the man who lived to run it into a huge fortune with factories in the United States, Canada, Australia and South Africa.

Mr. Kellogg was one of those who believed in giving the people what they want even before they are conscious of the desire. In the cold cereal field he has had many imitators.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

Corliss Lamont once made the point:

"Can a Democratic government logically permit totalitarian parties to advocate the violent overthrow of the state? I am convinced that the answer is 'yes' and that the right to advocate revolution is a basic constitutional liberty in a Democracy."

If the right to advocate change is inherent in freedom, so is the right to oppose change. This truth, Communists and civil libertarians often choose to disregard. Yet, freedom is not a one-way street upon which only those who are in dissent may walk.

This Lamont acknowledges. He wrote:

"No doubt practically everyone here today would agree with me that there exists in the United States the necessary political machinery for peaceful and Democratic change in either a conservative or a radical direction."

I think we can go further than that. For instance, there are those who are content with the American system of life. They have rights, too. I think that just as any man has the liberty to advocate vast and fundamental changes, so any American has the liberty to prevent such changes from coming into being. Just as anyone may criticize our form of government, and our economic system, and our social institutions, so any American has the liberty to fight the advocacy of such changes and to prevent them from being advocated at his expense, namely, by the use of taxpayers' money without the consent of the majority of the taxpayers' money without the consent of the majority of the taxpayers.

Those who object to school auditoriums being used to advocate the destruction of the system which erected the schools, have as many rights as those who insist that schools must be amoral institutions in which the fundamentals of our civilization may not be taught because they emanate from religion.

This comes down to the question of our schools and colleges. In the public schools, the public high schools and the public colleges, the ownership is vested in the people. Such institutions exist on the moneys of the taxpayers, who have the right to determine the nature and purpose and service of these institutions by a majority vote in a legislative body. The teachers, professors and administrators are employees whose nature of service, responsibilities, obligations and rights are determined by laws passed by legislatures and regulations issued by the designated officials. That is the essential contractual relationship.

Anyone has the option of accepting employment on the basis of the laws and regulations or not accepting employment. If the legislature demands a loyalty oath, those who reject the loyalty oath have the privilege of resigning. It would seem by the logic of the situation that they have no other alternative.

In privately-owned schools and colleges, other factors enter into the picture except in such institutions as accept tax exemptions. If the legislature makes it a condition of tax exemption that those who teach take an oath of loyalty, it would seem that there are these alternatives: Either to agree to the loyalty oath or to give up the tax exemption. Institutions which refuse to accept tax exemptions cannot be involved in the conditions which accompany such exemptions.

The fallacy of those who advocate revolution is that they refuse to respect the rights of those who oppose revolution. And in a country such as ours, those who oppose revolution have every right to set up legal barriers against revolutions. Acts of Congress and of state legislatures and decisions of the courts are legitimate steps to preserve the traditions and habits of the country.

The revolutionists have always taken the position that they have the right to stand on the barricades, to shoot for their version of liberty, but they reject the right of their opponents to shoot back. They insist upon their right to advocate overthrow, by peaceful means or by violent means, of the existent society but reject the right of the majority of the existent society to adopt peaceful or violent means to defend themselves. This position is utterly untenable.

Archaeologists estimate California was inhabited 70,000 years ago, but not by retired Iowa and Kansas farmers.

Scare buying is over, says one economist. Probably people are scared of the prices.

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE
"NOW, pack your things," Elliot ordered when he was ready to leave. "I'll have some money ready. You can pay me back later."

"You might cash a check for me," Laura suggested.

"I think I won't do that. I don't want you to be involved, even in the most casual fashion, with a man who has a wife living. Even checks get talked about, even in this growing metropolis. I already wear a faint aura of scandal. I rode an ambulance to the hospital because a little kid I liked was hurt and I felt more than a little to blame."

"She hates me now," Laura sighed bitterly. "That hurts, Jim."

"Young heartbreak is soon cured," he remarked. "You young things will both recover. I'll call you and let you know the time the plane takes off. And I'll come for you and take you to the airport."

"Which will involve me in a more than casual fashion with a man who has a wife living," she reminded him, some of the old impish look coming back into her eyes.

"This morning I consulted an eminent attorney and long bridge player, Mr. Ramsay Iglehart. Mr. Iglehart has a wife who sounds on any number of kilowatts. Undoubtedly by now the whole town knows that I'm about to resume my eligibility."

"You contradict yourself in a bewildering fashion. You won't cash a check at the bank but you'll be seen bidding me farewell at the airport," she argued.

"One thing I dislike," he announced with mock severity, "is a woman who raises questions. Men who cash checks signed by women are sometimes looked at curiously by the sexless breed of long-nosed chap behind bank windows. Go stick your clothes in a bag and do something about your nose. It's cute but it's red and mournful-looking."

"I still say you're a bully," she declared. "My mother likes cats. I think that I shall spend this enforced vacation thinking about the cats."

"I," he countered at the door, "never, never have fleas. There were things... we swiped oil out of the lamps and did something about them, when there was any oil. But no fleas."

When he had gone Laura felt lighthearted and strangely young again and safe. She had been alone and hurt and hunted, and now security had returned because a man wanted to take care of her. She had thought for so long that security meant building herself up alone, standing on her own courage and integrity, telling the world to go hang because she was Laura Gallagher, who had pulled herself up from red mire by her own grit and industry. She had thought that it meant buying a good endowment and making herself indispensable, and being a good sport and good company, and suddenly all that was no good. A man's hand on her cheek, taking the sting from his domineering. "Precious," he had said. She had never been precious—not even to John Blayde. She had never been precious to anyone, not even her own mother.

Laura gathered some clothes together, discarding all but the simplest of her dresses. Then speculating that Mary Gallagher might like to see her returning daughter properly bedizened with the evidences of success in a wider world, she folded the green silk suit and put it in, along with the mad hat and the long green gloves. Get Well QUICKER
From Your Cough Due to a Cold
with the Sensational A-C Factor in the New Intensified
FOLEY'S Honey & Tar Cough Compound
AMAZINGLY QUICKER ACTING INCREDIBLY MORE EFFECTIVE

LOST 75 POUNDS WITH THIS HOME RECIPE

Mrs. Della Philabaum, Box 203, West Lafayette, Ohio writes, "I have lost 75 lbs. with Rennel in four months and have never known a hungry moment. I am so much lighter on my feet and have never felt better. Rennel has done a world of good for me." Imagine, eat plenty and lose weight with this simple yet effective amazing home recipe. After purchasing a bottle of Rennel from your druggist pour the contents into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day.

That's all there is to it. No diets to complicate your meal planning. No expensive vitamins to fortify your system from weakness while going without food for you can eat normally. If the very first bottle doesn't show the simple, easy way to lose pounds of bulky fat and help regain slender, more youthful curves—if reducible excess fat doesn't seem to disappear almost like magic just return the empty bottle to the manufacturer for your money back. Don't be switched to another product, insist on genuine Rennel.

41 Good Neighbors Lend Helping Hand To Farmer Near Laurelville

They only expected 12 or 15 to pitch in and help, but the list carried a total of 41.

That was the number of men—all neighbors—who showed up Tuesday down below Laurelville to assist a fellow farmer who had a little tough luck.

The farmer was G. H. (Jimmy) Boden and he farms a 265-acre tract owned by G. E. Armstrong.

Boden still is hobbling around with the aid of a cane after having been seriously injured in an automobile accident several weeks ago.

And now is the time of year when a farmer must get his corn harvested and cribbed, his ground disced and his winter wheat in.

BUT A GUY all banged up can't do such a job—unless he has the kind of neighbors that surround the Boden farm.

Tuesday the neighbors—41 of them—rolled in.

They brought with them 18 tractors, seven mechanical corn-pickers, six grain drills, 12 disces, two trucks for hauling wheat—and a will to work.

And work they did.

Before sundown, this crew had harvested 50 acres of corn and had it cribbed. Then they turned around and disced that 50 acres and sowed it in wheat.

All the while, Boden stood by. He couldn't say a word. But none was necessary.

The fellows who helped were identified as follows:

Elsworth Kempton, Albert Karshner, Millard Black, Gail Winland, Wayne Bowers, Pearl Hinton, Richard Winland, William Roll, Fred Karshner, Clyde Deffenbaugh, George Winland, Herb Flanagan, Wilson Ross, Joe Tucker, Dan DeLong, Larry Holzschuh, Richard Winland, Earl Roll, Francis Hinton, Harry Fosnough, Russell Hott, Franklin Strous, Russell Anderson, Wallace Dietzel, Forrest Wolf, Lloyd Whisler, Ed Kelly, Guy Karshner, R. D. Miller, Paul Armstrong, Harley Congrove, Davis Pontious, Ray Hinton, Lester Albert, Albert Swackhamer, Raymond Hedges, Kenneth Robinson, Forrest Smith, Roger Egan and Everett Tatman.

Hocking County Sheriff's Deputy Charles Miller kept an eye on traffic along Route 56 where wagons and trucks were moving and Meril Poling, local distributor for the Ohio Oil Co., provided necessary engine fuels.

Local Officer Is Injured In Heartbreak Tiff

First Lt. John Porter of Circleville has been hospitalized in an emergency hospital station in Wonju, Korea, after having suffered shrapnel wounds in action Oct. 4.

The Circleville tank officer, husband of Mrs. Bonnie Porter of 201 East Franklin street and son of Mrs. Annie Greeno of 216 South Pickaway street, was wounded while commanding a tank company with the 23rd Infantry Division along "Heartbreak Ridge."

Porter arrived in Korea about five weeks ago and has been commanding a tank platoon covering infantry operations along the rugged "Heartbreak" drive.

He was injured by a bursting projectile, suffering shrapnel wounds in his neck and right leg. He was wounded in his left leg during World War II.

Oddly, the Circleville tank officer was wounded while observing his 35th birthday.

In a letter to his wife, the officer said a soldier standing beside him was killed by the bursting shell, while six others were wounded.

Porter was expected to have been hospitalized in Wonju until this weekend.

His new service address is: 23rd Regiment Tank Co., Second Division, APO 248, care of Postmaster, San Francisco, Calif.
